

We thank the ethical review committee for their careful review of our paper. We respond below to their request.

Ethical Committee Request: The ethics committee would like to require that the authors affirm, in their paper, that they have the right to use their dataset in the way they are using it, and that they bear responsibility in case of a violation of rights or terms of service.

Our response: We have expanded our Ethics and Broad Impact Statement section and included a statement indicating that we have the rights to use our dataset in the way we are using it, and we bear responsibility in case of a violation of rights or terms of service. We have also included a clarification that we followed the typical process used by all previous work of compiling the data through the official YouTube API and only sharing the urls of the videos, so the creator of the videos can always have the option to remove them.
